The Filipino Workers Network is an initiative of the Toronto & York Region Labour Council. It was formed in 2014 and is composed of Filipino-Canadian workers and union members in the greater Toronto area and York region. It brings together the Filipino Canadian workers to: discuss key issues within the community relating to labour, like living wage, good jobs, workplace and workers' rights; engage union members and help mobilize to improve labour law and Employment Standards; create alliances around goals of social and economic justice; and, give people confidence to be more active in their union, including taking leadership.
